Do you see the “Masterpiece” God has for your life?

Your Signature Life: Pursuing God’s Best Every Day

A new book by Dianna Booher

(Wheaton, IL, October, 2003) -- Would you be embarrassed if family and friends saw a videotape of your previous year—24/7? Many people would be, based on the fact that more people need to develop their lives around biblical principles. According to data collected by Barna Research survey, only about one-fourth (24 percent) reported that they base their moral decisions on religious principles or Bible content.

In another survey, 35 percent of Christians said that “to get by in life these days, you have to bend the rules for your own benefit.” How then can those who call themselves Christians overcome these statistics and create a life with character that is honorable to God and the people around them?

Dianna Booher’s new book, Your Signature Life, provides a biblically based blueprint to help people overcome character development obstacles and create a life that becomes a masterpiece worth presenting to God.

Using the creative process to illustrate how to develop your character in order to please God and benefit others, Booher divides her book into three parts:

Part One: Your Signature Self...Like Painting a Portrait

The canvas is yours. Your character is ready for your creation. Once you sign your name to it, and leave your earthly studio, you will be remembered by this distinctive work of art.

Part Two: Your Signature Relationships...Like Writing a Blockbuster

Consider the scenes, settings, moods, and dialogs you have with family, friends, enemies, neighbors, and coworkers as your life unfolds. Your relationships shape the plot of your life and can make your story one worth passing on.

Part Three: Your Signature Work...Like Building Your Dream Home

Just as a house reflects the personality of those who live there, your work—whether it’s a volunteer project, a part-time job, full-time parenting, or a career—reflects you. How you work and how it will benefit others depends on the attitudes and values you choose. You will find satisfaction as you find your calling and pursue it with a passion.
